SERBIAN ARTISTS IN CANADA

Introduction

In 1991, group of Belgrade University Graduates got together and formed a group called "Singidunum". Singidunum, an ancient name for Serbia's capital city Belgrade, is the name adopted by the Association of Belgrade University Graduates of Toronto.

The group of artists from this Association decided to exhibit their works. Most of these Serbian artists live in Canada now. They are responsive to the events, spaces, feelings, stories as all other artists of the world. Their connecting element is a phenomenon of personal experience. Such experience is often very intensive and even more pronounced when artists detach from their original environment.

In other words artists describe the relationship in their works by joining interiorities of their beings with what is outside of that realm. He or she uses the language to utter the occurrences of significant events, spaces, colours, feelings, of man and nature in the conjunction with or disjunction from. They articulate it through paintings or other medias they choose, in which they seek to synthesize the essence of inner vision with the nature, the language of images into the one that speaks out for them, for the world and to the viewer. This is how a dialogue not only between the artist with nature continues, but also the dialogue between a viewer and the artist with world resumes.

The "The Serbian Artist in Canada" exhibit is only a part of display of such experiences, images and visual dialogues. Again, this group of artists is no less partaker of such complex process than any other group or single artist in the world. Their diversity of expression reflects an advantage of exposure toward the experiences in different environment.

Mr. Nikola Ajdacic is one of the founders of the Association of Belgrade University Graduates that among many other activities is to organize exhibits. The Serbian Heritage Academy has been cooperative partner ever since. All the works are for sale as follows:
